Comment. A report [redacted] refers to this agency as the North Korean Cabinet Fisheries Department. Earlier reports refer to certain departments of the North Korean government as "departments of cabinet rank." The government agency in control of fisheries may be one of these. According to an earlier report, however, the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry was reorganized in early 1952, and renamed the Ministry of Agriculture. At the same time the Department of Forestry was established as a government department of cabinet rank.
